Hi Steve – As an update to our discussion this morning, the attached email message, below, notes that PCBs have been excavated from the Drum Marshalling area. My understanding is that this is the area which Jim Haklar discussed with you as per your email, below. When I spoke with my State counterpart, Jason Pelton, this afternoon, he confirmed that originally the Navy was interested in soil washing, but then they decided to excavate the PCB-contaminated soil. The Drum Marshalling excavation was done last summer, and the only other PCB excavation remaining is the shallow soil in Bethpage park, which is tentatively planned for excavating in 2021.

FYI, I coordinate with my State counterpart regularly, so if you are interested in an update at a later date, pls feel free to reach out to me. As per our discussion this morning, I understand your reasoning for sending the email, below, as this was the information available to you. If Nidal is interested, we can still meet with him regarding the upcoming soil excavation at Bethpage park if you are available.

Thanks,
Carol
